Why Most Supplements Fail

So I've heard this statement said more times than I care to admit, and that is, well, I don't see why Jimmy coming to you is gonna be so much better for me than the 9,000 other supplement companies that I have used or other supplements that have tried and they do nothing for.

Well, I don't want to be the bearer of bad news, but the vast majority of supplements that are out there aren't worth the label they're printed on. When Dr.

Whole-Food Supplements vs Nutraceuticals

Royalee created Standard Process, the godfather of nutrition in the United States, and the first person to do the 1st and only whole food supplement company, he showed what real vitamins, minerals, and enzymes did on their body.

At that time, he was getting a tremendous amount of improvement with people's conditions. The pharmaceutical industry then took notice and started to create what are called nutraceuticals.

These are things that are synthetic, the shell form, or high quantity forms of things, that aren't really the usable parts by the human body, so for example, if you picked up your supplement bottle and you looked at the back of it, and it says vitamin C in parentheses as ascorbic acid, you are getting the non-usable form of the vitamin c component.

Ascorbic Acid would be like the orange peel to the Orange. Well, what are you going to do? You're going take the peel off, throw it off and eat the The ascorbic acid, that leftover part, That's what they're giving you.

That is not the usable form of vitamin C in the body. Another telltale sign is that if you're buying a supplement that says 5,000 milligrams or 500 milligrams, a thousand milligrams maybe 5 000 milligrams.

Standard Process and Personal Results

That is a nutraceutical. That has a concentrated condensed form of something, but not the usable parts that the body requires. So standard process is, in my opinion, the best whole food supplement company in the world.

It's the only thing I've put in body for the past 10 years. I am walking proof of not only the work that we do, with the quality of the supplements that you take.

Walked away from the medical system when I was 27 years old and since that time I have not taken anything that is not from Standard Process or one of the other amazing vendors that we operate with, but we do everything that's whole food based, the actual parts that your body needs, not something that synthetic or something was strapped with a label on and sold to you for you to waste your money.
