Phase Two: Healing and Observation

So phase two of our health restoration program is called healing and observation. Healing and Observation is the phase that we get to once things have started to stabilize.

As much as I wish I could tell you we could fully heal or remedy somebody in four to six weeks, that is not realistic because by the time we've gotten our hands on you, It has been days, weeks, months, or years that your body has doing this.

But once we start to improve, the supplements are creating an improvement to your bodies abilities, your diet is improving, you education is risen. We no longer need to hold you under lock and key on this bi-weekly phase.

To kind of say the proverbial leash gets lengthened. You've earned more responsibility over your health, so now we don't need keep you as much. In Healing and Observation, we're still doing everything that we previously were.

So we are always monitoring your active organs and areas to ensure that they're responding appropriately. We're always continuing to do dietary and lifestyle guidance as well as educating you.

It's just done with a little bit more space in between visits. In this phase, We may also be giving you recommendations or referrals to other allied health professionals or other services that We provide.

So it all is all dependent and contingent upon the progress that your body is making. But for example, through the muscle testing we do, we could evaluate if you have something like a spine subluxation, and we can say to you, well we're not chiropractors, so we cannot adjust this, but we are locating some stress in your L2, L3, or you know, your C1, C6, whatever the case is.

We could give you some pinpoint findings that we now could refer you to some other allied healthcare providers to improve the quality of why you're having an issue or an ailment.

So, in recap, healing and observation is that you're starting to heal. We're observing the progress that is made. You may be adding or subtracting something or referring somewhere, but it's all in the observation of where you were, to where are, where do you want to become, and we will discuss that in maintenance.
