What Is Nutrition Response Testing? Transcript

(Transcripts are generated by AI and may contain errors)

What Nutrition Response Testing Is

Let's talk a little bit about maybe the most important question and answer. What is nutrition response testing? Nutrition response is a non-invasive procedure that allows the practitioner to locate and identify underlying nutritional deficiencies as well as environmental toxicities that could be inhibiting the body's normal and natural abilities.

So our bodies were designed to do everything on their own. We are by definition a self-regulating organism. Nutrition response testing just allows us to communicate with this body, this self regulating organism and determine what parts of it are working well doing their jobs versus which ones may have some sort of toxicity or deficiency that's leading to a lack of function.

Because see, I can promise you this, any symptom that you have is just the effect It is not or ever the cause. Nutrition response testing allows us to get to the CAUSE of why a problem is in existence, feed and nourish the body so that function can be restored and your God-given natural abilities of what these bodies were designed to do can correct the issue around it.