Collaborating with doctors on food choices

What do you want a physician or a doctor to know who's talking to patients about making food choices for health? I would like a Doctor or physician to notice talking of patients that we are on the same team and the more we can collaborate around food, the better.

Seafood is one of those things that is still the Wild West. It lacks traceability, it lacks accountability in many cases. And so we need you guys more than ever in this food category to help us navigate.

I think that the more we can cross borders and the the healthier everybody's going to be.
